It would be helpful to state at the beginning of the survey that you will need some time to complete the survey and its "essay" type questions. Teachers are always trying to squeeze in chores in a brief window of time--as I just did--and I was unhappy to find that I needed to spend some time composing anecdotal answers to more involved questions, not just filling in bubbles. I needed more time to think of complete answers and good examples, but I had already begun the survey and felt compelled to finish and submit it.
